Collection Description

Historical and Biographical Information

The institution currently known as the University of Maine at Fort Kent was established in 1878 as the Madawaska Training School with the goal of training teachers who would serve their community. Over the years, the institution has undergone a few name changes, with the final name change to the University of Maine at Fort Kent happening in 1979. Despite its different names, the institution and its mission has stayed the same throughout its history.

The President's office serves the University presidents and their operations. The current president at the time of this finding aid's creation is President Deb Hedeen who has been serving as UMFK's president for two years. Her executive assistant, Lisa Roy, donated these materials to the Acadian Archives when the President's office was being cleaned in preparation for a move.

The Acadian Archives was created in 1990 as an effort to preserve the Acadian, French-Canadian, and local history and culture of the Saint John Valley region. The archives creation was a community effort and has continued to garner support from its community patrons who use our services and attend programs regularly. Representatives John Martin and Judy Paradis among others played important roles in supporting the Archives mission and getting funding passed in the Maine Legislature, including to build the Archives' current building.

Scope and Content

This collection is made up of one framed document and one folder of administrative documents and correspondence. The framed document pertains to the University as an institution and the other documents pertain to the Acadian Archives' creation in 1990.

Arrangement

The files in the folder were partially rearranged by the processing archivist into chronological order.
