This collection consists of materials pertaining to a student project by Jennifer Albert, Amy Roy, Clint Pelletier, Lisa Theriault, Andrew Chamberland, and Pete Michaud for the course "Anthropological Folklore," taught by Professor Mariella Squire during the spring 2001 semester at the University of Maine at Fort Kent. For the project, the students kept an activities journal, conducted two interviews, and wrote an essay. These materials are included in the collection, as well as interview transcripts. The project focuses on local ghost lore in Fort Kent, Maine, and the Saint John Valley of Aroostook County, Maine. For the project, the students interviewed two people: Brenda Daigle, who discussed ghosts and ghost stories pertaining to the Violette Settlement in Fort Kent; and Carol Roy, who discussed the "Satan's Harvest" legend and other local ghost stories.
