Collection Description

Historical and Biographical Information

Jean-Paul Michaud was born in 1943 to Sylvio and Irene Michaud. He was raised and educated in the town of St. Agatha, Maine. He graduated from Fort Kent State College in 1964 and, after 2 years in the United States Army, worked at the Library of Congress. He received his Master's degree from Louisiana State University, and in the fall of 1970, Michaud accepted a position as a beginning librarian with the New York Public Library, where he remained for thirty years. After retiring in 2000, he has worked with other volunteers in Prospect Park and with Big Apple Greets, an organization that provides an opportunity for New York City tourists to meet local residents.

His enthusiasm for collecting started in 1976 when he met Norman Wiltsie, who was interested in antiques and ephemera, especially world fairs. In those days, New York had many second hand bookshops and flea markets. Every Saturday and Sunday dealers from around the area would go to the city. On Sundays, Norman would go to the flea market. Rather than stay home Jean Paul started to accompany him on his rounds. His first acquisition was a beautifully illustrated travel brochure of Quebec. The pictures had great charm and to him, it was the place of his ancestors. It was an idealized setting with snow covered trees and beautiful people who were sipping cognac in horse-driven sleighs. Dinner at the Chateau was no doubt included in this tour.

What Jean Paul remembers best of traveling in Quebec in the 1950's is the family taking a car ride to Rivière-du-Loup. His father, Sylvio, would stop at roadside stands next to the beehive ovens where the women sold warm bread and homemade butter. Jean Paul says childhood remembrances stay with you forever.

What harm can one or two of these little brochures do? Subsequently at the markets he found some maps, postcards, stationery and menus from the Chateau Frontenac, you name it. It was all there for the taking. His best purchase came from Boston at the Goodspeed Bookstore. There, on the "soon to be discarded" table was a box full of travel brochures, maps, train schedules from someone's trip to Quebec in the 50's. Jean Paul could not pass it up. From then on, his collecting was mostly out of control. Norman and Jean Paul would attend ephemera shows in Hartford CT, Allentown PA, or Greenwich CT. They would spend their vacations in New England mostly going from shop to shop. They got to know dealers who would alert them if unusual items came up. The doorknob from the Chateau Frontenac was found in Atlantic City at a huge antique fair. Souvenir spoon dealers are also a good source. Souvenirs and commemorative china are their own specialty and so are postcard dealers; within that group there are subject categories of an infinite number.

Once Jean Paul got it home, his training as a librarian came in handy. Postcards and related items for the Champlain Tercentennial of 1908 were grouped together. Postcards were organized by towns, others by subject such as calèches, shrines, or cards in certain series: habitants at work, on the farms, etc.

Norman died in 2000 and after that Jean Paul's enthusiasm waned. They enjoyed the companionship of shopping together and finding 'treasures' for their collections. Jean Paul retired, made new friends with new interests and collecting became less important. He told myself that he had enough. Not that he has ever stopped going to antique stores, book fairs, etc., but the major drive to add indiscriminately to the collection ceased.

‘The important thing in all this madness is that it must be fun. You have to enjoy going through piles of junk before you find the treasure that you did not know you needed, but now you must own.’ Needless to say, Jean Paul does not remember where all these items come from but he does remember the enjoyment he had finding it. Now Jean Paul is delighted to share it with a wider audience.

Historiography of postcards:

Deltiology is the formal name in the USA for postcard collecting, and remains the third largest collectable hobby in the world. The direct ancestor of postcards in envelopes printed with pictures on them. These first decorative envelopes are believed to be first produced. Canada introduced the postcard in 1871 and the United States introduced officially issued postcards in 1873. The standard size postcard has remained largely unchanged even up to the present day. As their popularity grew postcards became a primary way to send friends and family a snapshot of one’s surroundings while traveling, or even photographs of one’s home or family.

The popularity of postcards and the collecting of them can be attributed to their broad subject appeal. Almost any subject imaginable has been, at some time, portrayed on a postcard. The standard card showed an image on one side and the other side was left blank for writing the address and a short message to the recipient.

Different era cards:

Private Mailing Card Era, 1898 - 1901: Starting in 1898, American publishers were expanding postcard-printing services and were allowed to print and sell postcards bearing the inscription, "Private Mailing Card, Authorized by Act of Congress on May 19, 1898".

The Golden Age, 1901 – 1907: In 1901, the U.S. Government granted the use of the words "Postcard" to be printed on the undivided back of privately printed.

Divided Back Era, 1907 - 1915: By this period, a divided section for writing was almost universal. Prior to and during this period, a majority of American postcards were actually printed in Europe, especially in Germany whose printing methods were regarded as the best in the world. The economics of this era, the rising import tariffs and the outbreak of World War I led to a swift decline in the cards imported to North America. Thus, the political strains of the day brought about the end of the "Golden Age" as publishers in North America began to claim a larger part of the pie.

Early Modern Era (White Border), 1916 - 1930: The cards of this era were usually printed with white borders around the picture, thus the term "White Border Cards".

Linen Card Era, 1930 - 1945: Changing technology now enabled publishers to print cards on a linen type paper stock with very bright and vivid colors. Sets and series were few and far between and the greeting card was almost exclusively replaced with the new French-fold cards.

Modern Chrome Era, 1939 - Present: The Union Oil Series began in 1939, launching the new era of photo chrome cards. Photo chromes are commonly called "Modern Chromes", and still the most popular cards today. These are the best reproductions to come along in years and commonly sought by collectors.

View Cards have been the mainstay of the collecting field. People have long collected and traded cards of their home towns and places they have visited. View cards offer historic reference to buildings, streets, and even towns which may no longer exist or that have changed significantly over time. The messages written on the cards often give us insight as to the picture shown or the sentiments of the day.

Greeting Cards: Early greeting cards are some of the most beautiful cards ever printed. Publishers competing for sales, printed cards using intricate embossing techniques, high caliber artwork, superior inks, expensive lithographic processes and even novelty additions such as glitter, ribbons, silk and feathers.

Historical Cards are printed to commemorate events such as war, social problems, expositions, parades, coronations, politics...These cards offer much to the serious collector in the way of increased value. Often this type of card was made of a real photograph with few copies being offered for sale. Often the historical significance of a card comes from the message written by the sender.

Art Cards are probably the most important category in antique postcards. Unlike the view or greeting card, most art cards were special interest cards when they were printed and in most cases brought a much higher price. This rarity, combined with the skill of the artist of this period, make these cards very popular among collectors. Artists could make more of a profit off their works by selling postcard prints of their work. This booming market drew the very best artists of the period, creating a wealth of quality material unmatched in the art world.

Photographic Cards: These real photo art studies of beautiful women, children, lovers are often hand tinted in great detail and in colors which almost defy description. Also made popular were the photomontage techniques, which allowed photos to be altered into original art creations.¹

Royal Winton History: Royal Winton is an English brand of earthenware and fine bone china tableware. Leonard Lumsden Grimwade, born in Ipswich in 1864, was the driving force behind Grimwades Royal Winton pottery. At age 16 he moved to Hanley in North Staffordshire to work as a decorator and modeler in pottery, however, by the age of 20 and with dynamic enthusiasm and energy now apparent, he opened his own business. He was joined the following year (1885) by his elder brother Sidney Richard Grimwade, who was a potter, and hence the firm of Grimwade Brothers was born.

Business was so brisk, and with company turnover doubling year by year, a new Winton Pottery was built in 1982 to cope with this developing trade. Grimwade Brothers acquired the Stoke Pottery in 1900 with the owner James Plant joining the Grimwades board. The three potteries were then amalgamated under the title of Grimwades Limited, with Leonard Grimwade as the chairman. Over the next dozen years, and with business booming, Grimwades Limited added another four potteries to the company.

In 1913 King George V and Queen Mary visited the potteries touring numerous factories, but had no objection to Grimwades using the word Royal as a prefix (eg. Royal Winton, Royal Hampton and Royal Dorset) even though Grimwades had never applied for, or received, permission to do so. Queen Mary happily purchased a Winton tea set in the new Queen Mary Chintz. In time Royal Winton was regarded as the "Rolls Royce" of Chintz.

In 1931 Leonard Grimwade died in a car accident, failing to avoid a bus at crossroads. He died as he lived, at full throttle. Later in the same year James Plant died and two years later his son James Junior took over as the Managing Director. He died in 1962.

In 1964 the company was taken over by the Howard Pottery Co Limited of Shelton. Since then there have been several owners of Royal Winton, but despite all of the various takeovers, the name Royal Winton has been kept intact. In 1995 Royal Winton became part of the Taylor Tunnicliffe Group, registering the company as Grimwades, trading as Royal Winton and reproducing many of the chintz patterns.²

Scope and Content

This collection consists of a variety of materials collected by Mr. Jean Paul Michaud over a period of many years through bookshops, flea markets, etc. The collection contains printed materials, booklets/brochures, philatelic material, magazine articles, maps, portraits, lithographs, photographs, a stereograph viewer with stereograph cards, an extensive assortment of very collectable postcards, dishware, a spoon collection, and a sculpture.

These materials are dated circa 1834 to 1996 and reference mostly the provinces of Quebec, especially Quebec City, the Maritimes, and the State of Maine.
